

THE INCOMPARABLE NIJINSKY, WHO SLIGHTED NEW YORK LAST SEASON, HEADS THE BALLET Russe THIS YEAR. IT OPENS AT THE MANHATTAN OPERA HOUSE TO-MORROW.

Photos by Count Jean de Strelecki.

Lydia Lopokova, in "Le Spectre de la Rose."

Flore Revalles, star of "Cleopatre" and "Thamar."

Lydia Sokolova, who dances in "Carnaval."

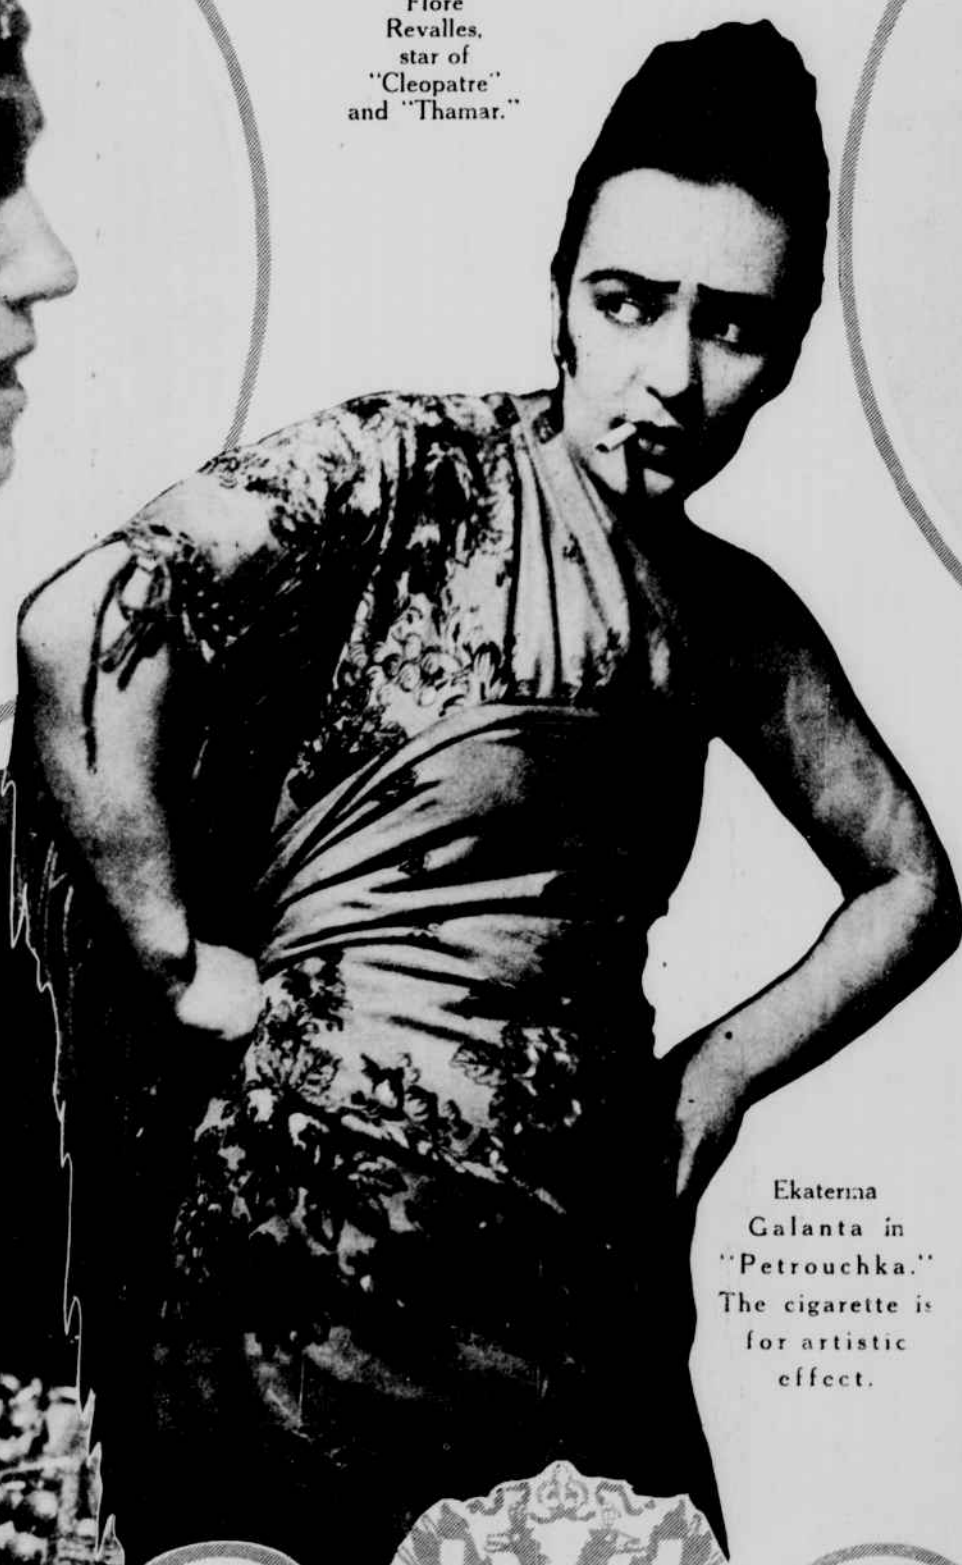

Waslav Nijinsky, this season's faun in last season's sensation, "L'Après-Midi d'un Faun." He will also be seen in the new ballets, "Till Eulenspiegel," "Le Dieu Bleu" and "Mephisto Valse."

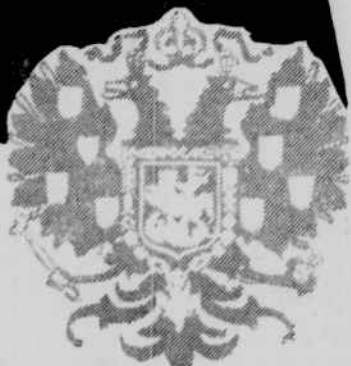

Sophie Pflanz, in "Scheherazade," which keeps the police censors awake at night. She will be in several other old and new productions.

Adolf Bolm in costume for his part in "Cleopatre." He will dance in the premiere of "Sadko," which he originated.

Ekaterina Galanta in "Petrouchka." The cigarette is for artistic effect.

Alexandre Gavrilov, another of the "Cleopatre" stars.

